I enclose you that letter & add a line to tell you that my cold is quite gone & we are all well. What a terribly warm day you have had. I have felt so sorry for you for you must have suffered so much- We are dreading our expedition so very much tomorrow but we must make the best of it. I feel very happy to day [sic?] even] though you are away from me & so much happier in the anticipation of the future than I have ever been. Much love for you.

Yours ever
Mary

Darling – You must send your groomsman’s directions, I believe it is necessary to send them invitations from Mama.

Papa sent invitations to Miss Lane & the President to Bedford. I wanted him to wait & let me consult you but he said it was right & I suppose it was of no consequence either way. Shall I send them to your clergyman uncle too – I send you one for Miss Hetty- Much love for you.

Yours,
Mary-
