Dear Sir

I should be glad to accept your invitation - but I fear to promise, as my time is so constantly occupied by professional engagements as to leave me no time for other things - the lecture you refer to, I fear would not answer well with training, as it was ordered as a literary lecture; but I believe it had but little pretension to the character; but was a promising talk mostly of local Antislavery matter - I remember your father, I suppose to hear from his son -
