

History of the Reformed Mennonite Church

By WILMER J. ESHLEMAN

Much historical data have been recorded during the dim and distant years of the past regarding churches, their leaders, doctrines and customs. As Lancaster County includes in its borders the site of the organization of the denomination known as the Reformed Mennonite Church, which had its beginning in 1812 on a quiet, peaceful farm in the beautiful countryside on the edge of the historic borough of Strasburg, when John Herr, Abraham Landis and Abraham Groff became the leaders of a new denomination, it seems altogether proper that an authentic account should be recorded in the annals of our Society.

The Reformed Mennonite Church today has spread throughout the greater part of the United States and through some provinces in Canada. It adheres strictly to the doctrine of Menno Simon (who was a contemporary of Luther, Zwingli and Calvin) which is embodied in the "Eighteen Articles of Faith," drawn up April 21, 1632, in a General Conference at Dortrecht, Holland, by fifty-one representatives from seventeen Mennonite congregations. These Articles of Faith, as set forth in the "Martyrs' Mirror" are as follows:

"I. Of God and the Creation of all Things.

"We must believe that there is a God — God consists of Father, Son and Holy Ghost — God is the creator and preserver of all things — Of the creation of Adam, who was created after the image of God — Of the creation of Eve.

"Since it is testified, that without faith it is impossible to please God, and that whosoever will come to God must believe that God is, and that he is a rewarder of all those who seek him; therefore, we confess and believe, according to scripture, with all the pious, in one eternal, almighty, and incomprehensible God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and no more and no other; before whom there was no God, nor shall any be after him; for from him, by him, and in him, are all things; to whom be praise, honor, and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

Genesis 1

"We believe in this one God, who works all in all; and confess that he is creator of all things, visible and invisible; who, in six days, created heaven and earth, the sea and all that is therein; and that he governs and upholds all his works by his wisdom and the word of his power.

Acts XIV, 15

"Now, as he had finished his work, and had ordained and prepared every thing good and perfect in its nature and properties, according to his good pleasure; so, at last, he created the first man, Adam, the father of us all; gave him a body formed of the dust of the earth, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, so that he became a living soul, created by God after his own image and likeness, in righteousness and true holiness, unto eternal life. He esteemed him above all creatures, and endowed him with many and great gifts, placed him in the pleasure garden, or paradise, and gave him a command and prohibition; afterwards he took a rib from Adam, made a woman, and brought her to him for a helpmate, consort, and wife. The consequence is, that from this first man, Adam, all men that dwell upon the earth have descended.

Genesis I, 27; II, 7, 17, 18, 22

"II. Of the Fall of Man.

"Our first parents did not continue long in the blessed state in which they were created — Were deceived by the subtlety of the serpent and envy of the devil — Death, the wrath of God, and condemnation, passed upon all men in consequence of the fall — Adam and Eve, from whom is the whole human family, were driven out of paradise — None could redeem Adam and his posterity — They would have perished eternally, if God had not provided for them.

"We believe, and confess, according to the tenor of the scriptures, that our first parents, Adam and Eve, did not remain long in the glorious state in which they were created; but, being deceived by the subtlety of the serpent and the envy of the devil, they transgressed the high command of God, and disobeyed their Creator; by which disobedience, sin came into the world, and death by sin, which has thus passed upon all men, in that all have sinned, and hence incurred the wrath of God, and condemnation. They were, therefore, driven of God, out of paradise, to till the earth, to toil for sustenance, and to eat their bread in the sweat of their face; till they should return to the earth from which they were taken. And that they, by this one sin, became so far fallen, separated, and estranged from God, that neither they themselves, nor any of their posterity, nor angel, nor man, nor any other creature in heaven or on earth, could help them, redeem them, or reconcile them to God; but they must have been eternally lost, had not God, in compassion for his creatures, made provision for them, interposing with love and mercy.

“III. Of the Restoration of Man by the Promise of Christ.

“Notwithstanding the deplorable fall, God provided a means for man’s restoration, the immaculate Lamb, Jesus Christ — God gave his Son to the fathers through promises — The fathers waited for redemption.

“Concerning the Restoration of the first man and his posterity, we believe and confess, that God, notwithstanding their fall, transgression, sin, and perfect inability, was not willing to cast them off entirely, nor have them eternally lost; but that he called them again to him, comforted them, and testified that there was yet a means of reconciliation; namely, the Lamb without spot, the Son of God, who was appointed unto this purpose, before the foundation of the world; and was promised, while they were yet in paradise, for consolation, redemption, and salvation, unto them and all their posterity; nay, from that time forth was bestowed upon them by faith; afterwards all the pious forefathers, to whom this promise was frequently renewed, longed for, desired, saw by faith, and waited for, the fulfillment, that at his coming, he would redeem, liberate, and release, fallen man from sin, guilt, and unrighteousness.

“IV. Of the Coming of Christ, and the Reason of his Coming.

“In the fulness of time God sent his Son — he was manifested in the flesh, born of the Virgin Mary — We are satisfied with the account given by the evangelists, of the incarnation of the Son of God — In Christ is our only salvation — After finishing his course, he was nailed to the cross — He was crucified, buried, rose from the dead — He died for all — He became the cause of salvation unto all that believe on him.

“We further believe and confess, that when the time of the promise, which all the forefathers anxiously expected, was fulfilled, this promised Messiah, Redeemer, and Savior, proceeded from God, was sent, and, according to the prediction of the prophets and the testimony of the evangelist, came into the world, nay, was made manifest in the flesh, and thus the Word was made flesh and man; that he was conceived by the Virgin Mary, who was espoused to Joseph, of the house of David; and that she brought forth her first born Son at Bethlehem, wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger.

"We further believe and confess with the scriptures, that when he had fulfilled his course, and finished the work for which he was sent into the world, he was, according to the providence of God, delivered into the hands of the wicked; that he suffered under Pontius Pilate; was crucified, dead, and buried; rose again from the dead on the third day; ascended to heaven, and sits on the right hand of the majesty of God on high; whence he will come again to judge the quick and the dead.

Luke XXII, 53; XXIII, 1; XXIV, 6, 7, 51

"And also, that the Son of God died, tasted death, and shed his precious blood, for all men; and that thereby he bruised the serpent's head, destroyed the works of the devil, abolished the hand writing, and obtained forgiveness of sins for the whole human family; that he thus became the means of eternal salvation to all those who from Adam to the end of the world, believe and obey him.

"V. Of the Law of Christ — The Gospel or the New Testament.

"Of the new testament of Jesus Christ, containing the whole counsel of God — All men have repentance for the remission of sins preached to them — None are excluded from the inheritance of the blessed, except unbelievers and the disobedient.

"We believe and confess, that previously to his ascension, he made, instituted, and left his new testament, and gave it to his disciples, that it should remain an everlasting testament, which he confirmed and sealed with his blood, and commended it so highly to them, that it is not to be altered, neither by angels nor men, nor to be added to nor diminished. And that, inasmuch as it contains the whole will and counsel of his heavenly Father, as far as is necessary for salvation, he has caused it to be promulgated by his apostles, missionaries, and ministers, whom he called and chose for that purpose, and sent into all the world, to preach in his name among all people, and nations, and tongues, testifying repentance and the forgiveness of sins; and that consequently he has therein declared all men, without exception, as his children and lawful heirs, so far as they follow and live up to the contents of the same by faith, as obedient children; and thus, he has not excluded any from the glorious inheritance of everlasting life, except the unbelieving, the disobedient, the obstinate, and the perverse; who despise it, and, by their continual sinning, render themselves unworthy of eternal life.

“VI. Of Repentance and Reformation.

“The first lesson of the new testament is repentance and reformation, to which all men are bound—Internal virtues are indispensable, without which baptism and the Lord’s supper avail nothing, though instituted by Christ—By faith the remission of sins is obtained; nay, by it we become children of God.

“We believe and confess, since the thoughts of the heart are evil from youth, and prone to unrighteousness, sin, and wickedness, that the first lesson of the new testament of the Son of God, is Repentance and Reformation. Men, therefore, who have ears to hear and hearts to understand, must bring forth fruits meet for repentance, reform their lives, believe the gospel, eschew evil and do good, desist from sin, and forsake unrighteousness, put off the old man with all his works, and put on the new man, created after God, in righteousness and true holiness; for neither baptism, supper, church, nor any other outward ceremony, can, without faith, regeneration, change or reformation of life, enable us to please God, or obtain from him any consolation, or promise of salvation. But we must go to God, with sincere hearts and perfect faith, and believe on Jesus Christ, according to the testimony of scripture; by this faith we obtain forgiveness of sins, are justified, sanctified, nay, made children of God, partakers of his image, nature, and mind; since we are born again of God from above, through the incorruptible seed.

“Baptism, history of—Acts II, 38; all penitent and believing persons, must be baptized according to the doctrine of Christ, and according to the example and usages of the apostles — For what end this must be done.

“As regards Baptism, we confess that all penitent believers, who, by faith, regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, are made one with God, and written in heaven, must, upon their scriptural confession of faith, and reformation of life, be baptized with water, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, agreeably to the doctrine and command of Christ, and the usage of his apostles, to the burying of their sins, and thus be received into fellowship with the saints; whereupon they must learn to observe all which the Son of God taught, left, and commanded his disciples.

“Of the visible church of God and its members — This is the chosen people — God purchased his church with his blood — Criteria whereby the true church may be known: 1, Faith; 2, Walk according to the holy ordinances of Christ, &c.

“We believe and confess a visible Church of God; namely, those who, as aforementioned, do works meet for repentance, have true faith and true baptism, are made one with God in heaven, and received into the fellowship of the saints here on earth. We confess, moreover, that the same are the chosen people, the royal priesthood, the holy nation, who have the witness that they are the spouse and bride of Christ; nay, children and heirs of everlasting life, a tent, tabernacle, and dwelling place of God in the Spirit, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ being the chief corner stone, (upon which his church is built). This church of the living God, which he bought, purchased, and redeemed, with his own precious blood, with which, according to his promise, he will always remain to the end of the world, as their protector and comforter, nay, will dwell with them, walk among them, and protect them, so that no floods nor tempests, nor the gates of hell, shall prevail against or overthrow them, is to be distinguished by scriptural faith, doctrine, love, godly walk, as also by a faithful conversation, use and observance of the true ordinances of Christ, which he strictly enjoined upon his followers.

“Of electing officers in the church of Christ — Christ commanded, that every man should walk in the vocation, wherewith he is called — Of the care which Christ had for his church — He provided the church with ministers, before his departure — The apostles followed the commands of Christ — They commanded every where, that suitable men should be ordained teachers — They must have a good report, and be blameless in conduct — Of electing deacons, &c. for what purpose elected — Their duties, &c.

“As regards Offices and Elections in the church, we believe and confess, since the church cannot subsist in her growth, nor remain an edifice without offices and discipline, that, therefore, the Lord Jesus Christ himself, instituted and ordained offices and ordinances, and gave commands and directions, how every one ought to walk therein, take heed to his work and vocation, and do that which is right and necessary. For he, as the true, great chief shepherd and bishop of our souls, was sent and came into the world, not to wound or destroy the souls of men, but to heal and restore them; to seek the lost; to break down the middle wall of partition; of two to make one; to gather together out of Jews, gentiles, and all nations, a fold to have fellowship in his name; for which, in order that none might err or go astray, he laid down his own life, and thus made a way for their salvation, redeeming and releasing them, when there was no one to help or assist.

"And further respecting deacons, that they, particularly when they are capable, being elected and ordained thereto by the church, for the relief and assistance of the elders, may admonish the church, being appointed thereto, and labor in word and doctrine, assisting one another out of love, with the gift received of the Lord; by which means, through the mutual service and assistance of every member, according to his measure, the body of Christ may be edified, and the vine and church of the Lord, may grow up, increase, and be preserved.

"X. Of the Holy Supper.

"Of the breaking of bread — for what end instituted: 1, to commemorate the sufferings of the Lord; 2, to own to ourselves redemption; 3, that we are to love one another, &c. — to preserve the unity of the Spirit.

"We likewise confess and observe a Breaking of bread, or Supper, which the Lord Jesus Christ instituted with bread and wine before his passion, eat it with his apostles, and commanded it to be kept in remembrance of himself; which they consequently taught and practised in the church, and commanded to be kept by believers, in remembrance of the suffering and death of the Lord, and that his body was broken, and his precious blood was shed for us, and for the whole human family; as also the fruits hereof, namely, redemption and everlasting salvation, which he procured thereby, exhibiting so great love towards us sinners, by which we are greatly admonished to love one another, to love our neighbor, forgiving him, as he has done unto us, and try to preserve the unity and fellowship which we have with God and one another, which is also represented to us, in the breaking of bread.

"We also confess The washing of the saints' feet, which the Lord not only instituted and commanded, but he actually washed his apostles' feet, although he was their Lord and Master, and gave them an example that they should wash one another's feet, and do as he had done unto them: they, as a matter of course, taught the believers to observe this as a sign of true humility, and particularly as directing the mind by feet-washing, to that right washing, by which we are washed in his blood, and have our souls made pure.

"XII. Of Marriage.

"How God first instituted marriage — Christ abolished the abuses of it — Marriage is voluntary, yet it must be entered into in the Lord — Comparison of the marriage of the fathers who intermarried in their families, with Christian marriage, &c. — This spiritual people is the true people of God, &c.

1 Corinthians VII, 39

"We confess that there is in the church, an honorable Marriage between two believers, as God ordained it in the beginning in paradise, and instituted it between Adam and Eve; as also the Lord Jesus Christ opposed and did away all the abuses of marriage, (which had crept in) and restored it to its original institution.

Genesis I, 27

Mark X, 4

"In this manner, the apostle Paul also taught marriage in the church; and left it free for every one, according to its primitive institution, to be married in the Lord to any one who may consent: by the phrase, in the Lord, we think it ought to be understood that, as the patriarchs had to marry among their own kindred or race, so likewise the believers of the new testament are not at liberty to marry, except among the chosen race and spiritual kindred of Christ; namely, such, and no others, as have been united to the church, as one heart and soul, have received baptism, and stand in the same communion, faith, doctrine, and walk, before they become united in marriage. Such are then joined together according to the original ordinance of God in his church; and this is called marrying in the Lord.

Genesis XXIV, 4

1 Corinthians V, 11; IX, 5

"XIII. Of the Magistracy.

"Of the authority of the magistracy — The end for which it was ordained — We have to submit to and pray for it that we may lead a quiet life. (1 Timothy II, 1)

"We believe and confess, that God instituted and appointed Authority and the Magistracy as a punishment for evil doers, and a protection for the good; as also to govern the world, and preserve the good order of cities and countries; hence, we dare not despise, gainsay, or resist the same; but must acknowledge the magistracy as the minister of God, be subject and obedient thereunto in all good works, especially in all things not repugnant to God's law, will, and commandment; also faithfully pay tribute and tax, and render that which is due, even as the Son of God taught and practised, and commanded his disciples to do; that it is our duty, constantly and earnestly to pray to the Lord for the government, its prosperity, and the welfare of the country, that we may live under its protection, gain a livelihood, and pass a quiet, peaceable life in all godliness and sobriety. And further, that the Lord may reward them in time and eternity, for all the favors, benefits, and liberty, we have enjoyed under their praiseworthy administration.

1 Timothy II, 1

"XIV. Of Defense.

"Defense forbidden to christians — According to the doctrine of Christ, we dare not persecute or injure any one — by well doing we must convince evil doers.

"As regards revenge, in which men resist their enemies with the sword; we believe and confess, that the Lord Jesus Christ forbid his disciples and followers all revenge and defense, and commanded them, besides, not to render evil for evil, nor railing for railing, but to sheathe their swords, or in the words of the prophets, to beat them into plowshares.

1 Peter III, 9

Zechariah IX, 8, 9

"Hence, it is evident, according to his example and doctrine, that we should not provoke or do violence to any man, but seek to promote the welfare and happiness of all men; even, when necessary, to flee for the Lord's sake from one country to another, and take patiently the spoiling of our goods; but to do violence to no man; when we are smitten on one cheek to turn the other, rather than take revenge or strike back. And, moreover, that we must pray for our enemies, feed and refresh them when they are hungry or thirsty, and thus convince them by kindness, and overcome all ignorance. Romans XII, 19, 20. Finally, that we should do good, and approve ourselves to the conscience of all men; and according to the law of Christ, do unto others as we would wish them to do unto us.

2 Corinthians IV, 2

Matthew VII, 12

"XV. Of Oaths.

"Christ has forbidden oaths — Our words to confirm any thing must be yea and nay — We must strictly observe all that we promise as though it was confirmed by an oath.

"Respecting oaths, we believe and confess, that Christ the Lord forbid his disciples the use of them, and commanded that they should not swear at all; but that yea should be yea; and nay, nay. Hence we infer, that all oaths, greater and minor, are prohibited; and that we must, instead of this, confirm all our promises and assertions, nay, all our declaration or testimony in any case, with the word yea in that which is yea, and with nay in that which is nay; hence, we should always and in all cases perform, keep, follow, and live up to our word as faithfully as if we had confirmed and established it with an oath. And if we do this, we have confidence that no man, not even the magistrate, will have just reason to lay a more grievous burden on our mind and conscience.

2 Corinthians I, 17

"XVI. Of Excommunication or Separation from the Church.

"Of excommunicating the sinner — Who are to be excommunicated — the reasons why: 1, to cause repentance; 2, for an example to others; 3, that the church may be kept up; 4, to remove the cause of slander — How we are to conduct ourselves towards those who have been excommunicated.

"We also believe and confess a ban, separation and christian correction in the church, for amendment and not for destruction, and whereby the pure may be distinguished from the defiled. Namely, if any one, after he is enlightened, has attained the knowledge of the truth, and is received into the fellowship of the saints, sins, either voluntarily or presumptuously against God or unto death, and falls into the unfruitful works of darkness, by which he is separated from God and debarred his kingdom; we believe that such person, when the deed is manifest and the church has sufficient evidence, may not remain in the congregation of the righteous; but shall and must be separated as an offending member and open sinner; be excommunicated and reprov'd in the presence of all, and purged out as leaven; and this for his own amendment and an example and terror to others, that the church be kept pure from such foul spots; lest, in default of this, the name of the Lord be blasphemed, the church dishonored, and a stumbling block and cause of offense be given to them that are without; in fine, that the sinner may not be dammed with the world, but become convicted, repent, and reform.

Isaiah LIX, 2

1 Timothy V, 20

1 Corinthians V, 5, 6, 13

2 Corinthians X, 8; XIII, 10

James V, 19

"Further, regarding brotherly reproof or admonition, as also the instruction of those who err, it is necessary to use all care and diligence to observe them, instructing them with all meekness to their own amendment, and reprov'ing the obstinate according as the case may require. In short, that the church must excommunicate him that sins either in doctrine or life, and no other.

Titus III, 10

"XVII. Of Avoiding the Separated.

"How we are to avoid the separated — this must be done according to the doctrine of Christ and the apostles — We must use discretion toward those who have been excommunicated.

"Touching the Avoiding of the Separated, we believe and confess, that if any one has so far fallen off either by a wicked life or perverted doctrine, that he is separated from God, and consequently is justly separated from and punished by the church, such person must be shunned according to the doctrine of Christ and his apostles, and avoided without partiality by all members of the church, especially those to whom it is known, whether in eating, drinking, or other similar temporal matters; and they shall have no dealings with him; to the end that they may not be contaminated by intercourse with him, nor made partakers of his sins, but that the sinner may be made ashamed, be convicted, and called to repentance.

1 Corinthians V, 9, 10, 11

2 Thessalonians III, 14

"That there be used as well in the avoidance as in the separation, such moderation and christian charity as may have a tendency, not to promote his destruction, but to ensure his reformation. For if he is poor, hungry, thirsty, naked, sick, or in distress, we are in duty bound, according to necessity, and agreeably to love and to the doctrine of Christ and his apostles, to render him aid and assistance; otherwise, in such case, the avoidance might tend more to his ruin than to his reformation.

2 Thessalonians III, 15

"Hence, we must not consider them as enemies, but admonish them as brethren, in order to bring them to knowledge, repentance and sorrow for their sins, that they may be reconciled with God and his church; and, of course, be received again into the church, and so may continue in love, as is becoming.

"XVIII. Of the Resurrection of the Dead, and the Last Judgment.

"Of the resurrection — those who live at the resurrection shall be changed — Of the reward of the righteous — Of the unrighteous — Summary of the doctrine of salvation — The apostles believed and taught this creed.

"Relative to the Resurrection of the Dead, we believe and confess agreeably to scripture, that all men that have died and fallen asleep, shall be awaked, quickened, and raised on the last day, by the incomprehensible power of God; and that these together with those that are then alive, and who shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye at the sound of the last trumpet, shall be placed before the judgment seat of Christ; and the good be separated from the wicked; that then every one shall receive in his own body according to his works, whether they be good or evil; and that the good or pious shall be taken up with Christ, as the blessed; enter into everlasting life, and obtain that joy, which no eye hath seen, nor ear heard, nor mind conceived, to reign and triumph with Christ, from everlasting to everlasting.

1 Corinthians II, 9

"And that, on the contrary, the wicked or impious shall be driven away as accursed, and thrust down into outer darkness; nay, into the everlasting pains of hell, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched; and that they shall never have any prospect of hope, comfort, or redemption.

Mark IX, 44

Revelation XIV, 11

"May the Lord grant that none of us may meet this fate, but that we may take heed and be diligent, so that we may be found before him in peace, without spot, and blameless. Amen.

"These now, as briefly stated above, are the chief articles of our general christian faith, which we teach and practise universally in our churches and among our members; which in our conviction, is the only true christian faith, which the apostles believed and taught, nay, testified with their life, confirmed with their death, and some also sealed with their blood; wherein we with them and all the pious, in our weakness, willingly abide, live, and die, that we may with them attain to salvation by the grace of the Lord."

As the Reformed Mennonites adhere more closely than other Mennonite denominations to the doctrines embodied in these Articles, they may properly be called Orthodox Mennonites.

Like many other denominations and societies, the Mennonite Church from the time of its foundation has had internal trouble, the first great division occurring in 1693, when Jacob Ammon led a group which are still known in the United States as Amish Mennonites.¹

The clothing worn by all members of the "Plain" churches has in the past created much discussion, and continues to do so. These churches base their ground on the following Biblical references:

Zephaniah I:8 — "And it shall come to pass in the day of the Lord's sacrifice, that I will punish the princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel."

1 Timothy II:9 — "In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array."

Isaiah III:16-24 — "Moreover the Lord saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet:

"Therefore the Lord will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the Lord will discover their secret parts.

"In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their cauls, and their round tires like the moon.

"The chains, and the bracelets, and the mufflers,

"The bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the headbands, and the tablets, and the earrings,

"The rings, and nose jewels,

"The changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples, and the crisping pins.

"The glasses, and the fine linen, and the hoods, and the veils.

"And it shall come to pass, that instead of sweet smell there shall be stink; and instead of a girdle a rent; and instead of well set hair baldness; and instead of a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning instead of beauty."

Deuteronomy XXII:5 — "The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment; for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord thy God."

Romans XII:2—"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

According to "Dress" by Mennonite General Conference, page 47, both Jesus and the apostles wore the Jewish garb. The Jews, as a covenant people, did not dress like the Philistines, Ammonites, Hittites or the Canaanites.

D. K. Cassel² says: "Menno himself during the greater part of his ministry went about with a price on his head. . . . During the Reformation sometimes clad like a peasant, with an axe on his shoulder, to disarm suspicion, he would go into the depths of the forest to minister to his scanty flock assembled there."

Professor Smith³ describes Dirk Phillips (or Deitrich Philips) who was an early Mennonite leader and a friend of Menno Simon—he died in 1568—as dressing in black with a round cap. Professor Smith⁴ quotes Kessler's description of Anabaptist or Mennonite dress about 1527 as follows: "They shun costly clothing, avoid excessive eating and drinking, wear coarse clothing and broad felt hats. They go about humbly, without weapons, neither swords nor pikes but with a short bread knife. They seem more concerned about an upright life than the Papists." Page 620: "The traditional explanation usually given for the opposition to wearing the mustache is that in certain parts of Europe it came into common use among the soldiers and acquired a military significance that was objectionable to the non-resistant Mennonites." (The Amish still shun the mustache.)

Eshleman⁵ states that on March 5, 1688, a meeting was held at Obersultzen to adopt a code of rules in addition to "The Articles of Faith." The rule on clothing decided on was as follows: "Those who were tailors or mechanics should not make any fancy garments or articles of any kind for the brethren or any one else, because it would promote worldliness. "Plain" church leaders tell me today that their clothing is cut similar to the fashion which prevailed from 1800 to 1820. At this time people of lesser means became more prosperous and dressed stylishly, while the Mennonites continued the same cut of clothing as heretofore, but in black to denote simplicity.

After the Mennonites arrived in Lancaster County in 1710 all was well for a time but within less than a hundred years internal trouble and division developed among them. It is likely that some of this may have been caused by lack of education, as in some instances a son inherited the ministry from his father and it appears that the qualifications for the ministry among these industrious people were not as great as they might have been. At the same time some of the people were beginning to read for themselves, thus causing discord between the ministry and certain members. Prosperity also appeared as a factor. The first faint rumble of recorded discord in the Mennonite Church came in 1742 when Martin Mylin of Lampeter Township built his "Palace of Sandstone," which was described as being too showy for a Mennonite.⁶

From about 1761 until 1775 the Rev. Martin Boehm caused tremors which reverberated throughout the Mennonite Church. Also in this period Rev. Jacob Engle, of later River Brethren prominence, became dissatisfied. Dr. Daniel Musser⁷ writes about Christian Kauffman, who was born in Hempfield Township in 1759, and who later became associated with Boehm. After joining the Mennonite Church in 1780, he (Kauffman) became dissatisfied with the worldly conditions which he claimed existed. He said ministers were lax in their duties and at meetings of the utmost importance, such as selecting new ministers, etc., they talked of the markets, trade, customs and money. Kauffman received one of the highest numbers of votes for the ministry but he refused, after much persuasion, to draw his lot because he said he felt unqualified to serve as a minister and that he did not believe the other candidates were any more capable.

In casting the lot, the following method is used: There are as many Bibles lined up as there are candidates and the number of Bibles containing slips of paper is limited to the number of ministers to be chosen. The candidates drawing the Bibles with the slips of paper will be ordained as ministers and the others will be rejected. Kauffman suggested that as many Bibles be placed as there were candidates and an additional number of Bibles with slips equal to the ministers to be chosen, be used. He said in this manner the Lord had a chance to make a choice and all could be rejected if they were not capable. The Bibles of course are so placed that no one knows which ones contain the minister slips. Kauffman's proposal was rejected. From that time he no longer attended Mennonite services.

The Mennonite Church must have been conscious of the discord within the denomination because a manuscript, written during the Revolutionary period by Mennonite bishops, ministers and deacons who constituted a Special Conference, contained the following: "Experience, however, proves that the sword, war and bloodshed will not lead men to unite together in meekness, humility and love; for, instead of love and faithfulness, we find that pride, covetousness, deception, and backbiting have (not by all but by many) gained a powerful hold. But that which is most deplorable is, even as in the kingdom of this world, there is discord, confusion, and dissension. So, also in these sad times, these same things manifest themselves among those of the same faith, and those who should teach the same things and be of one mind in Christ Jesus."⁸

One of the most prominent and celebrated men to withdraw—between 1780 and 1790—was Francis Herr, a son of the Rev. John Herr and Esther Neff, of Strasburg, who was a daughter of Dr. John Henry Neff, of Strasburg Township. He (Francis) was also a great grandson of Hans Herr and a great grandson of Rev. Benedict Brackbill, who was one of the most prominent Mennonite leaders in Europe and later in America during the Mennonite emigration to this country, and who was quite influential in arranging for their passage in 1710. Francis Herr was born on November 6, 1748, at Strasburg, in the house built by his minister father in 1740, the attic of which was equipped to hold the services of the Mennonite congregation of Strasburg. This congregation continued to meet there until 1804, when a church was built on the present site. Until recently this house and farm were owned and used as a summer home by A. F. Pontz, of Lancaster.

After his marriage Francis Herr purchased a farm near what is now Longenecker's Reformed Mennonite Church in West Lampeter Township, which is presently owned by I. C. Arnold, Esq., of Lancaster. On it is still standing the little stone and frame house that served as his home and where the first informal meetings of the insurgent Mennonite believers were held. It typifies the simplicity in which its former owner must have lived and deliberated. This farm as well as the present church property was a part of the original tract granted by William Penn to Christopher Franciscus in 1710 (Deed Book B, page 575).

When Francis Herr reached maturity, at the insistence of his father, he joined the Mennonite Church, but some time after 1780 he felt the church was departing from the straight and narrow path according to his conception of the gospel. He partly succeeded in bringing his minister father to the same conclusion. This added new fuel to the already burning sparks of turmoil kindled by the Rev. Martin Boehm and others. The magnitude of the situation demanded attention and it was decided to hold a meeting of bishops, ministers and deacons and settle this matter once and for all. John F. Funk⁹ lists some of the ministers of that time in the Lancaster District, as follows: Peter Eby, Jacob Brubacher, Christian Herr, Jacob Hostetter as bishops; Benjamin Hershey and John Herr as ministers; and a Deacon Mellinger. So we can assume that some of these men were present besides Rev. John Herr, as previously stated.

This meeting was held at Mellinger's Church, we can assume, about 1785.¹⁰ Francis Herr and his minister father went to this meeting together. During the meeting "Francis spoke openly to those assembled and freely gave his views of what the Scriptures require of the Church and what he thought it had become." He was followed by his father, the Rev. John Herr, whose views coincided with those of his son. After a discussion all parties left the church building except Francis Herr and his father. His father was later called out and his son was left alone. After consulting and deliberating for a time outside the church, The Rev. John Herr came in and spoke to his son saying: "Oh, Francis, we must give way to our brethren; we cannot stand against them." The group then came back into the church and there was further discussion with the result that they refused to accede to any of the proposals of Francis Herr. At this time he withdrew from the Mennonite Church, believing that his views were in accord with those taught by Menno Simon.

I interject a story here concerning a horse transaction (which seems trivial as compared with the issues being deliberated by the Mennonite churchmen of that day), not because of its importance but because it has caused much controversy in the past. The following details were told me by a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church (whose name I am not at liberty to disclose) who heard an old sister, Salinda Frick Swartley, say that she remembered when the incident was fresh in every one's mind. She was born in 1839 and died in 1914 and is buried in the Landisville Reformed Mennonite Cemetery. She said sometime before the meeting at Mellinger's Church was held, a farm sale was conducted which was attended by Francis Herr. A horse was one of the items to be sold and one of the Mennonite brethren condemned the horse in the presence of Francis Herr and others, saying that it was unsound. When the horse was put up for sale, this same brother, who had condemned the animal, bought him at a figure much lower than he would have had to pay had the other bidders known that the horse was sound — as it turned out to be. At the insistence of Francis Herr that the erring brother be punished, the Mennonite Church refused, which circumstance caused Francis to lose confidence.

Abraham Landis was born in East Lampeter Township in 1781, and joined the Mennonite Church in 1802. He, like others before him, became dissatisfied with the church because he declared the doctrines of Menno Simon were not observed. After some discussion by the church, the issue was again dropped and he withdrew in 1809. He later assisted in the formation of the new body. He died in 1861 and is buried in Mellinger's Mennonite Cemetery. The same was true of David Buckwalter, who later was a leader of the informal meetings held by the insurgents. He, too, is buried at Mellinger's.

John Herr stated that 2 Corinthians VI, 17, 18, justified the action taken by these Mennonite insurgents, as follows:

"Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you.

"And will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Dr. Daniel Musser¹¹ states: "This departure from the principles and practices of Menno and his brethren was the first and prime cause which the founders of the new organization always alleged was the reason for their procedure." After Francis Herr withdrew from the Mennonite Church, he held public meetings at his home which were largely attended by neighbors and others who had left the Mennonite Church and sympathized with his stand.¹² He was called to exhort at funerals of his friends. In these exercises he did not presume to be a minister of the Gospel since he had never been regularly ordained by any body of believers or by a church. Consequently he did not assume the position of a preacher, that is, he did not stand up to address his audience, but to signify the regard in which he held himself, he kept his seat as an exhorter.

That Francis Herr was in communication with the Quakers is proved by the publication of a book in 1790 entitled, "A short Explication of the written word of God; likewise of the Christian Baptism, and the peaceable Kingdom of Christ," which he addressed to them. In this book (pp. 41, 42 and 43) he gives what might be considered as the creed of the Reformed Mennonite Church, as follows: "Jesus Christ, having gone before us, in this doctrine, life and example, has commanded us to follow his example and has denied all revenge and resistance, which he has shown and manifested in his Gospel, doctrine and kingdom of Grace, and has told us to bear all afflictions wherewith he visits us, and not to revenge ourselves, but leave vengeance unto Him. You say in your publications, that all revenge was forbidden under the new covenant (New Testament) which I confess also: I must put this question to you: Is war more earnestly forbidden than going to law? To be elected to office means resisting force by force. And if we, because of the Gospel, cannot hold office, how should we be capable of electing others? Does Jesus not say that his kingdom was not of this world? You deny totally all warfare but make use of going to law, thus resisting force by force. I must ask you once more where going to war is more forbidden than going to law? It is clear and manifest that the kingdom of Christ is a peaceable kingdom, but men, being bad by nature, withstand the peace of the Almighty and will not submit themselves under the the scepter of his word. Therefore all men who will not submit under the scepter of his word, must submit themselves under the scepter of the kings and princes of this world which were ordained by God to reign over the kingdom of this world. Therefore, every one stands under the obligation to pay allegiance and be obedient unto them, and to avoid all rebellion or conspiracy that might be plotted against them, not for the sake of kings or princes but for God's sake. The children of God have no further obligation than to be obedient unto them (the rulers) when their laws are not contrary to the word of God."

During the life of Francis there was no church organization. He died on January 2, 1810. His last will, recorded in Will Book K, vol. 1, page 156, reads: "It is my will that my Executors shall not offer any Spiritous Liquors or strong drink to be sold at any vendue they may have of my goods after my decease." The whereabouts of his grave is to date unknown. His father is buried in the Strasburg Mennonite Cemetery and his only full brother, John, with his family is buried in the Herr graveyard at Wheatland Mills on the farm of Paul Longenecker. As this was very near to Francis' home, it is possible that he rests here also beside the whispering Pequea. He had four half-sisters and four half-brothers.

As the dissension in the Mennonite Church had caused this insurgent group to grow, the death of Francis Herr did not retard the faith and these believers continued their informal meetings. It appears that David Buckwalter,¹³ a friend of Abraham Landis, who had been close to Francis Herr, continued to lead at these informal meetings for about two years or less, until John Herr, the son of Francis Herr, was called upon prior to the organization of the new church. According to John Herr,¹⁴ they had no idea of forming a new church although they still assembled for mutual discussion and exhortation "until at length some persons accused them of holding their meetings privately, adding that if there was anything good, others should be allowed to partake of it." When it became known that John Herr had embraced religion and advocated the principles which his father had advanced, those who sympathized with Francis Herr requested the son to speak or exhort at funerals as his father (Francis) had done, to which he reluctantly consented. All those who sympathized with him were encouraged by his discourses and were unanimous in feeling that it was the will of God that they should organize themselves into a church order and that John Herr should be their minister.¹⁵ John Herr married Betsey Groff on April 7, 1807, by whom there were ten children. (His second son, John Forrer Herr was elected to the Pennsylvania State Legislature in 1854.)

That John Herr was an extraordinary man in his day is borne out by an account recently given me very reluctantly by one of the heads of the church, who desired his name to be withheld because they believe that publicity given living members would not be in conformity with the simplicity and humbleness of Menno's teachings. It appears that John Herr was a warm friend of James Buchanan, who had much respect for Herr's brilliance in oratory and logical reasoning and, when Buchanan was a candidate for Congress, he asked John Herr to deliver an address in behalf of his candidacy for that office. Herr felt as his father had believed when he wrote to the Quakers and he promptly refused, kindly telling his friend, the future president of the United States, that he had separated himself from worldly affairs of men to labor in the spiritual field.

Alexander Harris¹⁶ says of his early training: "His father's library, however, being composed of but few books save of the religious and devotional kind, it is reasonable to suppose that he should become well versed in the Bible and works of a religious character. In his youth, therefore, he perused works of Church History and the Reformation, the lives of the Martyrs, writings of Josephus and those of Menno Simon, besides others. The only fiction he ever read was John Bunyan's 'Pilgrims' Progress.' Poetry he appreciated very highly if of a devotional character; and in his mature years he composed hymns on frequent occasions. As regards science, art and rhetoric, he had no opportunities whatever in his youth to acquire a knowledge of them; and yet in his old age he had attained a fund of general information upon all these subjects. His extensive intercourse for many years with various classes of society, some of them the best scholars in the country, his great powers of observation, his faculty for minute analysis, his extraordinary memory and his extensive reading, caused him to become in his latter years, if not profound, at least well informed upon all ordinary topics."

On page 300, he describes the first sermon of Bishop John Herr: "The sermon delivered on that occasion (which must have been about the time of the organization of the new church) was, as tradition tells us, an extraordinary effort in the opinion of his hearers. In their opinion, it surpassed anything they had ever heard. No sooner was the news spread abroad that John Herr had preached such a powerful sermon, than applications poured in upon him to preach in various parts of the county. His services came in great demand on funeral occasions."

On page 301: "Mr. Herr's labors were soon heavy and exacting; he not only preached regularly and attended frequently at funerals, but was continually sought by individuals at home and abroad to offer the consolations of religion to the sick and dying. His time was so largely occupied in duties of this kind, that he was unable to devote much time to private affairs. In this he made great sacrifices, as regards pecuniary matters, for he was unwilling to receive any compensation in lieu of his time and services, feeling that the ministration of the Gospel should not be made a means of worldly accumulation."

On page 302: "The services of the Rev. Herr all this time were coming more in demand, and many invitations came to him to preach in the counties of York, Cumberland, Franklin, Lebanon, Bucks and Montgomery. As a consequence, his correspondence became very large; so much, indeed, that nearly all his time unoccupied in preaching was required to reply to his correspondents. He made visits to New York, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, when those states were but little reclaimed from their primitive condition as a wilderness, and when the crossing of the Alleghenies was regarded as quite an adventure." Page 303: "As he became advanced in years, and the fruits of his labours were ripening in distant and more extended regions, his correspondence grew more voluminous, so much so that it became necessary for him to call in aid to assist him in his labours." Page 304: "His oratory was both emphatic and persuasive. He was grandly eloquent; when he wished to enforce the truth the effect was electrical."

John Herr¹⁷ says: "Though my mental powers were but slightly developed, yet my mind was often deeply impressed by the admonitions of my father." On pages 382, 383, and 384, he gives a description of his conversion and on page 391 he relates his call to form a new church. In his slumber he was instructed by a vision as follows: "There were shown me very elegant stones, all glittering and exhibiting the appearance of having been fitted to each other, although they lay scattered about. With these I was to begin the building. There was shown me afterwards in a mountain a vast number of rough and unhewn stones, which I was to quarry out, this being all that I could do with them. After they came out of the mountain they were changed by the influence of an invisible power and received a shape and brilliancy similar to those I had first seen. This afforded me great joy and encouragement in building, for I perceived that these stones, so beautifully dressed, fitted into one another like the stones in Solomon's Temple, so that neither hammer nor iron instrument was required on the building. From this I was conveyed to another place, where I observed a large door at the entrance of an abyss (a bottomless pit) upon which Christ set his foot, and laying his hands upon his breast, he looked up to heaven and cried in a loud voice, 'Now is the mystery of God fulfilled and eternity sealed up.' And presently I heard a terrific sound as of awful and loud crashing thunder, the earth was convulsed, heaven and the elements were moved from their place and began to vanish away. Having come to, I lay in great agitation, laboring under the impression that my end was at hand; I wept and sighed to God for help and assistance. I prayed for the influence of the Holy Spirit to enable me to stand before his omnipotent justice and be controlled by his will.

"Now I opened my mind to my wife on condition that she should tell no one, lest my brethren might think that God had called me to the ministry, which at that time I could not consent to." As the meetings, which consisted of singing, admonishing one another with psalms and concluding with prayer continued, "My brethren now desired me to conduct the services—a very grievous request indeed—for I found myself extremely weak and unworthy in regard to the undertaking, wherefore I endeavored to excuse myself for this time; but they in reply asserted as their firm belief that God had called me to the work. At length I consented to do this, that I would take the precedence in our mutual exhortations." And now after about sixty years, during what might be termed the Mennonite Reformation in Pennsylvania, a Mennonite body was to be organized at Strasburg in Lancaster County.

Eshleman¹⁸ states on authority of Brons that in 1555 the First General Synod of the Mennonite Church was held at Strasburg in what is now Alsace-Lorraine. The attendance consisted of fifty delegates representing six hundred members of different congregations. And so, after two hundred fifty-seven years, we like to believe that their descendants, who were transplanted into a new world, were furthering the ideals of those fifty delegates by organizing a new body at Strasburg, Pennsylvania.

On May 30, 1812, the Reformed Mennonite Church was officially organized half a mile north of the village of Strasburg in the house of John Herr, on the farm now owned by Earl Groff, which belonged to the Howery tract, originally a part of the Martin Kendig grant in 1710. The John Herr house was of stone and burned down in 1898, but it was replaced by one of modern brick that stands on the site today. Several feet from this stands a peculiar log house with architecture like the one belonging to his father, Francis Herr, heretofore mentioned. Two-thirds of the building was one and a half stories high and the other third of the house was two full stories, with a narrow balcony attached to the second story. And we can assume that this log house was also the scene of much activity in connection with the organization of the new church. The barn, built by John Herr, was taken down in 1904 and was replaced by a modern structure. (This information was given me by Earl Groff.)

There has been controversy regarding the validity of the baptism and of the authority of the founders of the Reformed Mennonite Church. This was answered by Bishop Elias H. Hershey in a lecture at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on February 13, 1918, as follows: "The manner in which the Reformed Mennonites were organized into a church body has been described as irregular. We answer that Abraham Landis had previous baptism. For reflection we say that John the Baptist had not received water baptism before he baptized, that the Apostles had not received the baptism in the name of the Trinity, which they administered. Some one of them must have been first in the act of performing the new baptism commanded by Christ. That there is a distinction between John's baptism and that authorized by Christ must be admitted because in Acts 19th Chapter, Paul rebaptized twelve disciples who had been baptized by John. All organizations have a primary head who makes the first ordination."

Dr. Daniel Musser¹⁹ writes: "After much prayer and meditation, they unanimously elected John Herr to be their pastor and bishop; and, also, unanimously agreed in the appointment of Abraham Landis, to administer to him the rite of baptism," which John Herr describes as "The first evangelical order." John Herr then rebaptized Abraham Landis, who was elected to the ministry. Abraham Groff was chosen a deacon.

At this time they had no meeting-house and held their meetings in their dwellings, in school houses, and, in summer, often in their barns.²⁰ At the first meeting after the organization at John Herr's twenty-five persons were baptized at the home of David Buckwalter, in what is now East Lampeter Township. Soon after this meeting sixteen additional persons were baptized at the home of Jacob Weaver in West Lampeter Township. Among the latter was John Herr's mother, the widow of Francis Herr.

"Their mode of procedure in the administration of the ordinance of baptism is after the custom of the Mennonite Church.²¹ In the morning before opening the service, the bishop and generally another minister or deacon converse with the candidates for baptism, and inquire into his (or her) state of mind and whether he still desires to receive the ordinance. After this, the bishop preaches a sermon on a text from the Scriptures relating to water baptism and then invites those who still feel as they did in the morning to come forward."

The Reformed Mennonite subscribes and adheres to the Eighteen Articles of Faith, referred to previously, but takes the following as his Confession of Faith in the ceremony admitting him to membership:

Bishop's Salutation: "Since God in his mercy has visited you with His grace, so that you have been moved to forsake sin and turn to God, and you desire to confirm your faith by the ordinance of Water Baptism, I will ask you some questions.

1. Do you believe in an Almighty God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth, and all things therein and thereon? And in His Son, Jesus Christ, who left the glory of His Heavenly Father, and came down upon earth to redeem fallen man? That He was rejected of men, condemned to death under Pontius Pilate, was crucified and laid in the grave, and on the third day arose again, ascended to the Father, where He is seated at the right hand of the Father, interceding for us? And in an Holy Ghost, which proceedeth from the Father and the Son? And that these three, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, constitute the one Triune God, beside whom there is no other? (The candidate answers.)

2. Since you confess faith in God, and His Son, Jesus Christ, do you believe that you have repented of your sins, that they have been forgiven, that you have found Peace with God, and that you now desire to unite with His Church? (The candidate answers.)

3. Since you believe that your sins have been forgiven and that you have Peace with God, is it now your desire to renounce the world with all its vanities and extravagances and to faithfully obey the counsel of the Lord, since, as it is written, you are persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate you from the love of God, which is in Christ, your Lord?" (The candidate answers.)

The candidate and the bishop kneel, the congregation arise and prayer is offered. The candidate remains upon knees, the bishop arises and the audience are seated. A deacon or an assistant bears the water in a container, from which the bishop, holding his hands together, takes the water and, as he applies it to the head of the candidate, says: "Upon thine own confession of thy faith, thou art baptized with water, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

After all are baptized, the bishop received the brethren with the hand and a kiss, as they arise, with these words: "I receive you as a beloved brother in the Church of Christ." With brief admonition the sisters are received by the bishop with the hand and are greeted by another sister. After another brief exhortation all return to their seats. It is permissible for a minister to baptize in the absence of a bishop. (Ceremony taken from the minister's handbook.)

Dr. Daniel Musser²² writes that as the congregation grew it was decided to build a meeting-house. In the summer of 1812, following the organization, a piece of land was secured from the farm which formerly belonged to Francis Herr, adjoining the land of John Longenecker. As stated before, this was a part of the original grant to Christopher Franciscus in 1710 (Deed Book B, page 575). The church building was a frame structure, built adjoining the brick house of the sexton to the south. It had two doors facing the west, and an entrance opened from the sexton's house directly into the church. It had a seating capacity of four hundred people. The first services in the new building were held on November 7, 1812. John Herr referred to the new meeting-house "at Longenecker's" and ever since then it has been known as Longenecker's Reformed Mennonite Church. This building served as a place of worship until 1898 when it was taken down and the present brick church was erected.

Bishop John Herr, like the Methodist Bishop Francis Asbury and many others of prominence connected with Lancaster County, rode horseback to minister to the faithful and, like others, he rode through the countryside and forest on a trip to Humberston, Ontario, in the Dominion of Canada, and returned on the back of his trusty horse.

One of these churches or meeting-houses, which is no longer standing, was described to me as being rather unique. It was built near Refton in 1832 in what is now Providence Township, by Bishop Henry Bowman, who is buried in the graveyard nearby, and was known as Bowman's Meeting-house. It was located on the road which goes from Refton to Smithville, on the southwest corner where the hard road turns to the left as the dirt road leads off straight ahead. This meeting-house had a seating capacity of two hundred fifty persons and was torn down around the turn of the century, because many members moved away and the remainder of the congregation attended services elsewhere.

My grandmother, Mrs. Jacob C. Weaver, who lived nearby when a child, told me that Union soldiers on their way to Gettysburg stopped to get a drink of water from her home and to rest. They scattered in her yard and filled the little churchyard, many of the soldiers sitting on the porch. After several hours they shouldered their arms and started on toward Gettysburg.

The new church now started to expand as new converts eagerly came to hear what was proclaimed as the true adherence to the doctrine of Menno Simon. Churches were established at Millersville 1840, Lampeter 1849, Strasburg Borough 1865, Landisville 1869, New Danville 1837, Mt. Joy 1874, Shoeneck 1875, Denver, Shirk's and Steinmetz's (the latter three near Ephrata). There was also a church erected at 14 East German (Farnum) Street, Lancaster in 1855, now occupied by the Holiness Christian denomination. This building was sold, and in 1904 the present church was built at the corner of James and Cherry streets. Regular services were also held at the I.O.O.F. Hall, Paradise; A.O.K. of M.C., Mt. Nebo, and at the Public Hall in Georgetown.

With the coming of the automobile the following places of worship were discontinued: Paradise, Shoeneck, Mt. Nebo, Millersville, Mt. Joy and Strasburg Borough; because with the new mode of transportation, services so close together were not warranted.

About 1830 Bishop Christian Frantz moved to Waynesboro, Pa.; about 1833 the Rev. John Harnish moved to Clark County, Ohio, and was later elected bishop. The denomination grew steadily until it has spread throughout the greater part of the United States and parts of Canada.

Now, moving on to the year 1850, with Bishop John Herr becoming an old man, it appears that he realized his advancing years because he wanted to pay his brethren in Ontario a last visit. So, in the spring of the above mentioned year, he set out with Bishop Christian Frantz and Deacon Abraham Herr. This was to be John Herr's last trip and, after visiting the members of the church, he preached for the last time on April 27, 1850, at Humberston, Ontario, during the evening service. Following the service he went to the home of one of the members, namely, Benjamin Morningstar, where he became ill and never recovered. On May 5 a telegram from Buffalo, New York, brought the sad tidings to the congregation assembled at Longenecker's, where the regular Sunday morning service had just opened with a minister (name not recorded) preaching the introduction. Bishop Henry Bowman was sitting behind the pulpit, waiting to preach the sermon, when the telegram was read informing the congregation that their great leader had finished his pilgrimage on earth and had passed away on the 3rd day of May, 1850.

The sorrow that this news caused was very great and the congregation at once fell on their knees in prayer. Bishop Bowman, in a letter to the Rev. John Harnish, writes: "I dare say there was more weeping among us than among the Ephesians when the beloved Apostle bade them his last farewell, saying they should see his face no more." Bishop Bowman then addressed the congregation, admonishing them that they "should moderate their feelings because the Lord is merciful and his ways and acts are always right, though they bring us pain and sorrow." He also encouraged them to take fresh courage and continue in the ideals of the departed bishop.

After the service Bishop Bowman called at the home of John Herr's family at Strasburg, where the sorrow also was great. Arrangements were made to hold the funeral at Longenecker's on the following Tuesday, but by that time a second telegram notified them that the railroad company would not bring the corpse farther than Rochester, New York. The news arrived too late to change the arrangements and a large crowd gathered at the John Herr home and at the church at Longenecker's, which was crowded to capacity. Bishops John Hershey and Henry Bowman addressed the gathering at the home, while the Rev. Samuel Hershey and Bishop John Kohr, Sr., addressed those assembled at the church.

The two brethren who accompanied John Herr to Canada, took his body from Rochester back to Buffalo, where they engaged a wagon to take it to a brother Eggert's house near Williamsville, New York. The funeral was held there in the Reformed Mennonite meeting-house with interment in the village cemetery. In 1856 the remains were exhumed and the body of John Herr was brought home and buried in Longenecker's Reformed Mennonite Cemetery. His tombstone is inscribed as follows:

J O H N H E R R Bishop

Died, May 3, 1850

Aged 68 years, 7 mos. & 15 da.

Faithful and true in the vineyard of God

His life was devoted to Christ and his word.

A large pine tree now towers over his grave and, as if answering an appeal to heaven, it whispers soft requiems to those who pass by.

In the Lancaster County Register's Office in Will Book U, vol. 1, page 892, is the following statement from the last will of John Herr: "My executors shall be exempt from all moneys that cannot be collected without the assistance of the law and none of the heirs shall hold them accountable for the same."

The church continued to grow under the leadership of successive bishops, hereinafter listed. In 1912 it was decided to build a home for the aged and infirm members, thus marking the hundredth anniversary of the organization. The idea was conceived and proposed by Bishops Elias H. Hershey and John Kohr, Jr., of Lancaster County. The church approved the proposal and appointed a building committee, consisting of Deacon Frank E. Eshelman, Frank H. Bare and Elias R. Brown. The Reformed Mennonite Home was built in 1912 at West End Avenue and Manor Street, in the City of Lancaster at a cost of $20,000, and was occupied in 1913.

The administration of the Home is under a committee of three men and a matron, with Bishop Jacob L. Kreider of the Lancaster District, acting as chairman ex-officio on important matters. The other committee men at present are J. C. Leaman, Benjamin R. Nissley and F. Ross Bare.

Shortly after the construction of the Church Home, Milton Snavely Hershey, the chocolate magnate, whose mother was a member of the church, endowed it with a trust fund of $18,000 in her memory. His grandfather, Abraham Snavely, was a bishop of the church (information from Frank E. Eshelman). The Home is maintained on this, and other endowments and contributions, which provide cheerful and comfortable living quarters to many who are entering the sunset of life.

The church administration follows the pattern of most plain churches. A congregation is not a separate unit and membership is not confined to a separate congregation but to the church as a whole body wherever it is located. The jurisdiction of administration is divided into geographical districts, which may include several counties or a state. Each district has at least one bishop who acts as a chairman of the governing body, made up of ministers and deacons. In districts where there are two or more bishops the older one takes precedence in authority. In a district there is a stated number of churches and the ministers assigned to the district preach in each church on succeeding Sundays, although they frequently visit in other than their home districts.

It might be added here that no salary is paid to any of the church leaders, regardless of the position they hold. Like their fellow members, the ministers earn their living by some vocation other than preaching. They have their own insurance fund within the church and the members are assessed according to the amount of damage by fire each year by a ratio of the valuation of their property. Any one having property valued above $15,000 insures it in an outside company in order to ease the burden on the other members in case of fire.

To whom it may concern, I might add that I am not a member of the Reformed Mennonite Church but I am an ex-soldier and, as a matter of record, I have tried to give an authentic unbiased account gleaned from documents that I have been able to secure. As my father is a minister of the church I was able in my research to get substantial material never before recorded. In conclusion I have listed the bishops and ministers of Lancaster County from 1812 until the present day as follows:
